Senator Brant McCreadie

The public hearing was called to order at 10:05 a.m.

II. SUMMARY OF TESTIMONY AND DISCUSSION

Vice Speaker Benjamin J.F Cruz announced Bill No. 26-32 (COR). Senator Cruz stated that he introduced the legislation based on recommendation from a board member at the Department of Public Health and Social Services to create a new website to post government meeting notices and amend the Open Government Law to make it optional for the government to continue to publish those notices in local newspapers. Senator Cruz stated that the website would be only for public notices.

Vicente C. Pangelinan, Senator of the 32nd Guam Legislature, testified before members of the 32nd Guam Legislature and stated that he spends about $10,000 a year on ads in print publications for his public hearings as Chairman of the Legislature's finance committee. Senator Pangelinan stated that he wants to follow the law by placing the ads in order to get as much public participation as possible.

Senator Cruz stated that he calculated that if his committee placed similar ads to those of Chairman Pangelinan it would cost about $10,000 to $12,000 annually.

Vicente C. Pangelinan, Senator of the 32nd Guam Legislature, agreed with the assertions of Senator Cruz.

Senator Cruz said that two local newspaper publishers approached him, expressing concern about the bill because the publishers were concerned that removing government notices from newspapers would prevent a significant number of residents from seeing those notices. Senator Cruz stated that with the introduction of Bill No. 26-32 (COR) he hoped that it would save money because it costs thousands of dollars a year for the government to buy ads for public notices. Senator Cruz stated the government's current financial situation means cuts need to be found, and his bill would save money. Senator Cruz asserted that Ms. Limtiaco had made some good comments in her written testimony and he encouraged his colleagues to read the testimony.

Senator Yamashita inquired how the Pacific Daily News sampled the population for the survey.

Jason Sakazaki, Pacific Daily News, submitted written testimony on behalf of Rindraty Celes Limtiaco in opposition to Bill No. 26-32 (COR). Mr. Sakazaki stated that the survey was conducted locally by Market Research and Development.

Senator Cruz asked if the PDN could provide information on how much Senator's spend annually on ads for public hearings and other notices.

Jason Sakazaki, Pacific Daily News, stated that he did not have that information because he works in sponsorships and promotions, but that he could provide the information.

Senator Cruz asked if it would be possible to provide data from the PDN how much governmental agencies are paying for ads and if they are getting special rates for purchasing the ads in bulk.

Re: Written Testimony on Bill No. 26-32 (COR)

Dear Vice Speaker Cruz:

Hafa adai!

Thank you for the opportunity to submit written testimony on Bill No. 26-32 (COR), which serves to redefine what constitutes a Public Notice on Guam, as well as to create a government website by procuring the resources, including personnel, to create, manage and maintain the website.

I am writing to respectfully disagree with this legislation because it proposes to narrow access to government notices by disenfranchising a significant portion of our population. The legislation also will not tender the expense savings that it proposes.

I want to fully disclose that my company benefits from the current Open Government Law in that we do publish Public Notices as paid advertisements in my newspaper, and that we publish these Notices online at no extra charge. We also publish Public Notices in our news section, as a free public service. Those notices also are published online. I am not the only publication that qualifies to publish Public Notices, however, I am the only publication that reaches most of the island's population on a daily basis. Throughout my discussion below I reference the Pacific Daily News, as I can only talk to the policies of my company.

The Pacific Daily News takes the responsibility for Public Notices very seriously. We know these notices are vital, and they are treated with care and respect. To keep costs down for the client, the notices are set tight and held to strict space requirements. We index the notices, separate them into a section, and organize them to make sure first publications are clearly identified, to help our readers use them. If the notices were uploaded on a government Web site, taxpayers would incur the additional expense. The notices cannot be uploaded without the government spending money to expand payrolls to hire workers to post the notices, prepare verification standards and to retool their Web sites to make them easier for the public to find, and spend the money to let people public know the website exists.

Aside from being publisher and president of the Pacific Daily News, I have been a local journalist for most of my career. I believe that it is my responsibility to work toward making our community a better place for all of us to raise our families, work and succeed.

Throughout my career, I fought to keep our government transparent, open and accessible. I continue to do that as publisher. The Open Government Law is the statute that assures our people have access to the government that they elected. It is the statute that allows the people, our citizenry, to keep the government in check. Guam's Open Government Law is strong. It is something to be proud of. I would applaud any effort to make it even stronger.

However, Bill No. 26-32 does the opposite. It weakens the law by narrowing our community's access to Public Notices for hearings and meetings. By allowing a government website to meet the legal definition of a Public Notice, you would essentially be disenfranchising segments of our population who do not have the means, the desire or ability to access the Internet on a consistent basis. This legislation would disenfranchise most of our senior citizens as well as most of our low-income households.

Not everyone has access to the Internet. Statistics show only 56% of Guam's population has access to the Internet. A smaller percentage of certain demographic groups have access to the Internet — Filipinos, men, lower-income household, and adults 55 years and older — while 91% of adults on Guam say they read the Pacific Daily News each week.

According to the Pew Internet & American Life 2008 Tracking Survey, only 10% of Americans visit a government site on an average day. More than 40% of Americans have NEVER visited a government website. In the Pacific Daily News, Public Notices are available to nearly all adults on Guam.

I have attached as part of this testimony, several examples of published Public Notices that would directly impact seniors and low-income households. Without publication in a newspaper, these groups would not be given the opportunity to participate in issues that affect them. Maybe Tan Maria is not going to go to every meeting that is published, but she will go to the ones that impact her life. Our seniors are one of the most engaged and active groups in our community. I absolutely believe that they will not stand for being disenfranchised.

People in our low-income households are doing what they can to survive, especially in these tough times. Are they less deserving of the government's attention or the right to participate than those of us who can pay for monthly Internet access and computers in our homes?

This may be a different scenario a decade from now when Internet access may be more readily available, but we are talking about legislation, which if passed, will affect us today.

The Open Government Law defines a newspaper of general circulation. Why does it do that? It's so the government can't "hide" information in any random publication. The definition insures that the newspaper meets a specific distribution standard and federal requirements to qualify for a second-class mailing permit. The proposed legislation does not require any type of audience measurement for the proposed government website. If the website has only 100 visitors a month, the legislation currently states the site would be sufficient to meet the definition of Public Notice. It makes no sense that the Open Government Law would take the time to define audience standards for a print publication, then not require any standard for the government website.

Putting a Public Notice in a community newspaper enables citizens to be aware of what is happening on island and in their village. Putting a notice in an electronic database is not Public Notice. Closing the door on information denies openness. Considering the importance of government transparency, this is the worst time for Guam to minimize such basic information from public view.

The bill notes that creating the website and allowing Public Notices to be posted there will save the government and taxpayers money. Yet the bill authorizes the Department of Administration to procure the necessary hardware, software, personnel and other resources to build and manage the website. The cost of doing that, as well as marketing the website so that residents know it exists, does not support the premise of financial savings.

Guam has a government that prides itself on openness. Closing the door on disseminating this information to the masses would jeopardize the open and transparent government processes upon which our residents rely. During a time in which the public demands transparency, given the current economic situation throughout the government, it is important to trust this information with a non-partisan, third party provider.

The Pacific Daily News provides a neutral ground for these notices. It provides verification of the publication and has safeguards in place to provide the information at a later date if requested. Staff provides affidavits verifying the information was printed correctly and keeps bound editions of the newspapers for easy reference. Each day's newspaper is archived in the Library of Congress as an official record.

We don't want to be in a position where governments are released from the obligation to notify the public of what they are doing before a decision is made. Posting only on a government website jeopardizes open and transparent government and opens the door to allegations the government is hiding information. It should be required to post it on a medium that is independent of government and reaches the vast majority of residents. Publication by newspaper is also about the preservation of an evidentiary record. A printed page can't be manipulated.

I thank you for your time and for considering the information that I've provided. I hope that I've been able to convince you that this legislation would weaken the current Open Government Law.

Respectfully yours,

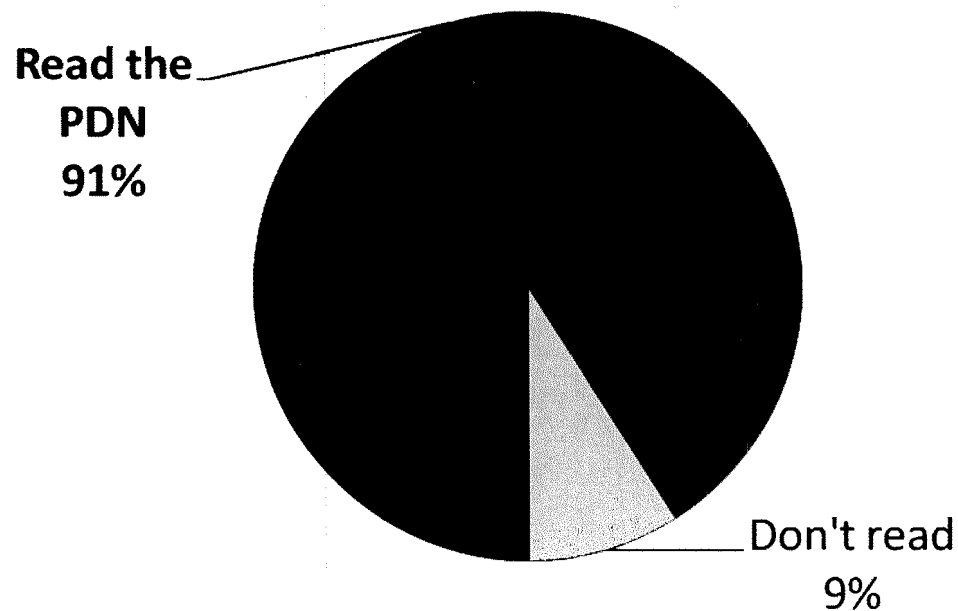

Rindraty Celes Limtiaco

The Pacific Daily News reaches nearly all adults on Guam

Percent of Guam Adults who read the Pacific Daily News weekly

The Pacific Daily News is the single most used news source on Guam by more than 4 to 1

The ONE news source adults use most often

Adults view the Pacific Daily News as the Most Accurate and Reliable source

Viewed as the Most Accurate and Reliable

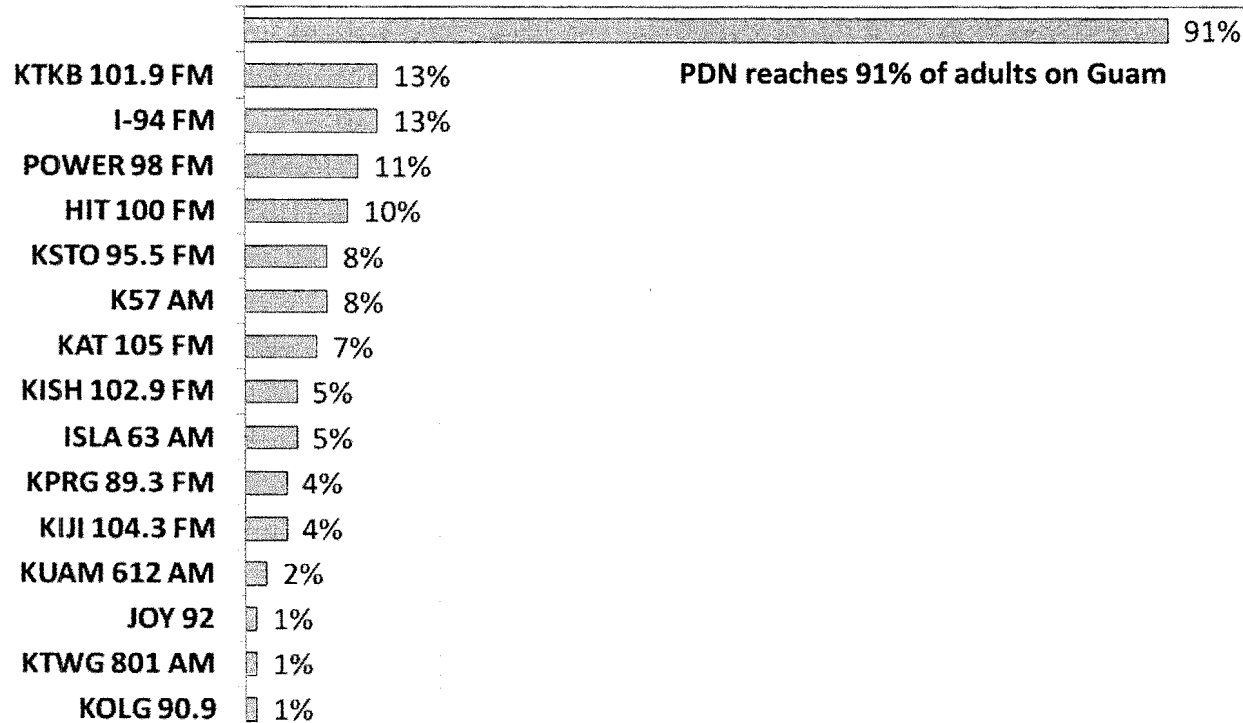

Internet access and use is limited by demographic groups on Guam, especially men, those who earn less, and older adults.

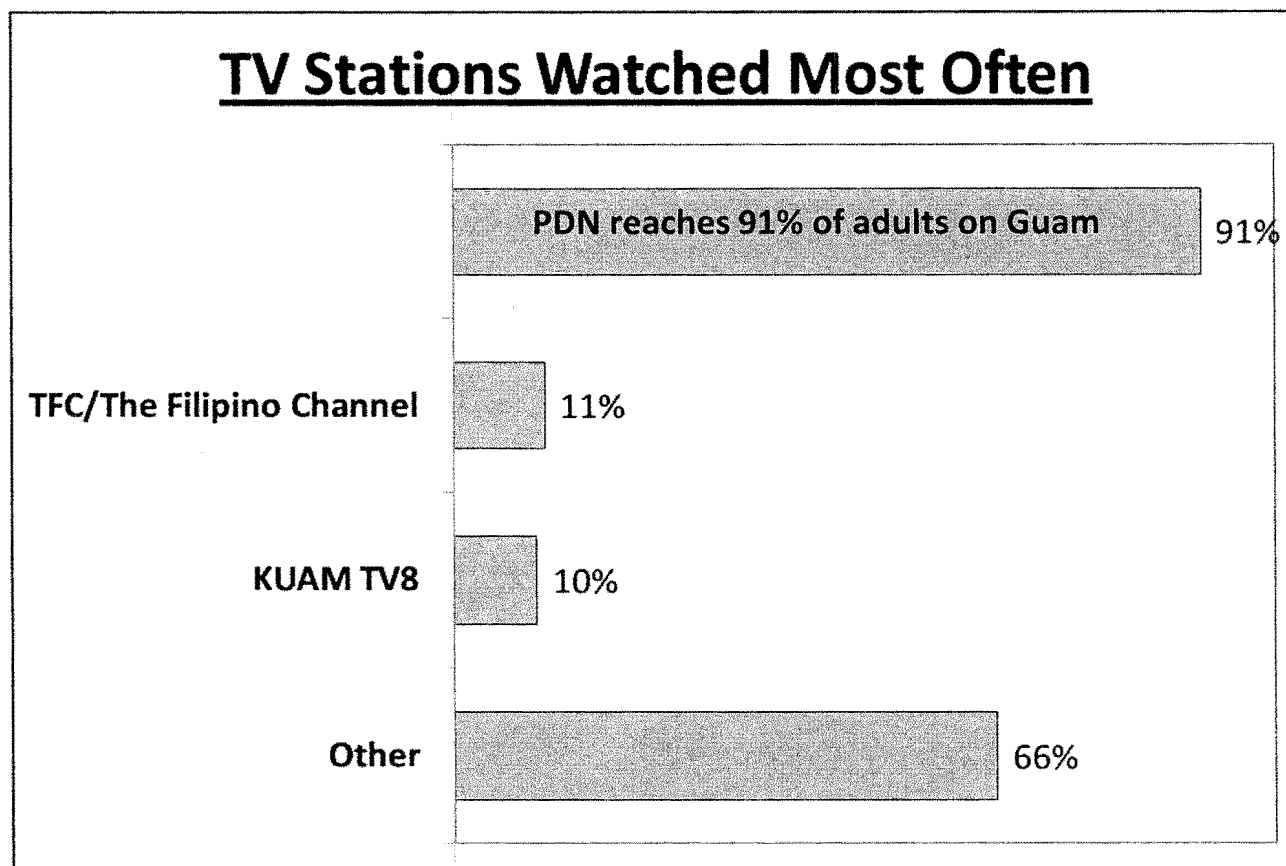

REACHING Listeners on the Radio is very fragmented because of the large number of stations to choose from

Top of mind awareness among Radio stations is low

REACHING TV Viewers is even more difficult because of the hundreds of TV stations to choose from

Why Keep Public Notice in Newspapers?

1. Publication vs. Internet only or Broadcast only Notice. For more than 40 years, the Pacific Daily News has been publishing public notices. Public notice laws were created to notify the public of government actions that may affect their interests or rights. Guam residents have come to rely on local newspapers for this information and, more importantly, the information is available to individuals who may not be searching for it so they also have adequate notice of government actions. Despite declining circulation in some U.S. markets, Guam is unique in that 91% of adults on Guam read the Pacific Daily News each week – and the Pacific Daily News continues to be the number 1 source used most often for local news on Guam by a margin of more than 4-1 over the Internet. With so many radio and television stations to choose from, it's very fragmented and no one station can significantly reach a broad group of Guam's population like the Pacific Daily News. The most people a Television station can claim as the station Watched Most Often on Guam is one in ten adults and for Radio it's two out ten; whereas, more than nine out ten will read the Pacific Daily News each week.

2. Newspapers are on the Internet and post notices via their Web sites. The Pacific Daily News uploads public notices published in its newspaper to its Web site Guampdn.com on a daily basis. Guampdn.com, free to the public, is a comprehensive and organized source for public notices. The site was used by more than 3.3 million unique visitors in 2012.

3. No additional cost to the government or public. The Pacific Daily News Web site is free to the public because they are supported by paid advertising in the Pacific Daily News newspaper. This site is the very example of what many support – using private enterprise instead of public dollars to provide a demonstrably valuable public service.

4. Accessible. Not everyone has access to the Internet. Statistics show only 56% of Guam's population have access to the Internet, and a smaller percentage of certain demographic groups, such as Filipinos, Men, Lower household incomes, and Older adults 55 years and older have access to the Internet, while 91% of adults on Guam say they read the Pacific Daily News each week.

Using the internet and visiting government sites is not the same. According to the Pew Internet & American Life 2008 Tracking Survey, only 10% of Americans visit a government site on an average day. More than 40% of Americans have NEVER visited a government website. In the Pacific Daily News, public notices are available to nearly all adults on Guam.

Putting a public notice in a community newspaper enables citizens to be aware of what is happening on island and in their village. Putting a notice in an electronic database is not public notice. Closing the door on information denies openness. At a time when transparency in government is important – this is the worst time for Guam to minimize such basic information from public view.

5. Ease of use. The usefulness of the newspaper-published presentation is underlined by the fact that the Pacific Daily News has readers who choose to have the newspapers deliver the notices. Obviously they find them useful. Public notices are a pure kind of news, telling the reader exactly who proposes to do what in the community, with no slant or editorial content. And the price is nominal – pocket change at any newsstand.

People understand print and online newspaper layouts, they know how to find things because they are familiar with them, and they have been around them for a long time now. Government Web sites are hard to navigate and are outdated making it hard to find things, in most cases it's because they lack a Webmaster, which can be very expensive.

6. Historically open, non-partisan verification. Guam has a government that prides itself on openness. Closing the door on disseminating this information to the masses would jeopardize the open and transparent government processes upon which Guamanians rely. During a time in which transparency is being demanded by the public, given the current economic situations throughout the government, it is important to trust this information with a non-partisan, third party provider. The Pacific Daily News provides a neutral ground for these notices and provides verification of the publication and has safeguards in place to provide the information at a later date if requested. Staffs provide affidavits verifying the information was printed correctly and keep bound editions of the newspapers for easy reference. We don't want to be in a position where governments are released from the obligation to notify the mass public of what they are doing before a decision is made. Posting on a government website only jeopardizes open and transparent government and opens the door to allegations the government is hiding information on their sites. They should be required to post it on a medium that is independent of government and reaches the vast majority of residents. Publication by newspaper is also about the preservation of an evidentiary record. A printed page can't be manipulated.

7. Notifying the community. The Pacific Daily News effectively "pushes" the Public Notices out to the public. If notices are only on government websites, it requires citizens to look for what they need to know. Publishing a public notice in the Pacific Daily News enables residents to be aware of and understand what is happening in their neighborhood, village and island. It prevents the notices being hidden in a hard to access source or a massive database. Government files are just that – files. Putting a document in an electronic database is not public notice. Publishing in a newspaper, bringing the matter directly to the attention of the community, is public notice.

A recent study (Oct 2011) done by the National Newspaper Association shows that citizens do read Public Notices. Of those polled, 83% read public notices (from very often to occasionally). It also shows that of those polled, 80% felt that governments should be required to publish public notices in newspapers.

8. Keeping costs down. The Pacific Daily News takes the responsibility for public notices very seriously. They know these notices are vital, and they are treated with care and respect. To keep costs down for the client, the notices are set tight and held to strict space requirements. We index the notices, separate them into a section, and organize them to make sure first publications are clearly identified, to help our readers use them. If the notices were uploaded on a government Web site, taxpayers would incur the additional expense. The notices cannot be uploaded without the government spending money to expand payrolls to hire workers to post the notices, prepare verification standards and to retool their Web sites to make them easier for the public to find. If the municipal websites are to be the new carriers of this legally vital information, that may require the government to upgrade their Web sites to meet a uniform standard, to ensure continued operation, to ensure their security from hacking, and to ensure that the archived information from past public notices remains accessible and secure as sites change to take advantage of new technology. All of this would cut into the envisioned cost savings substantially.

If public notices are posted in local government Web sites, the government should know that setting up, maintaining and updating Web pages has costs associated with it as well.

9. What it means. The idea of modifying public notices in the newspaper and putting them on government Web sites instead is the classic penny-wise, pound-foolish position. It reduces the placement and storage of legal public notices to the mere reproduction of words, but it is much more than that. It is about the preservation of an evidentiary record. Viewed from the standpoint of the end-user of such ads, the printing of them is a far more cost-effective method of assuring the integrity of this evidentiary record than installing the safeguards that would be required if government were to be trusted by the public with this job itself.

The Pacific Daily News publishes public notices in print and places them online at no additional cost.

Comments on Bill No. 26-32

The proposed legislation is seeking to establish the 'Guam Public Notice Website' that is to be administered by the Department of Administration. However, the funding source for the cost of such a proposal to develop the website, the accessibility of other government agencies to the website, the maintenance of such website and the potential cost for additional personnel services has not been identified. This proposal appears to be an unfunded mandate, requiring the use of current appropriation of the Department of Administration should this Act be passed.

This proposal is also amending Subsection 5 (A) and (C) of §8104 of Chapter 8, Title 5 GCA to include the legal publication of a department or agency's meeting transcription as required under Title 5, Chapter 8, Open Government Law, and to redefine the Public Notice term to include electronic filing under the proposed 'Guam Public Website,' cable access channels and broadcasting of public notices. These two proposed amendments are administrative changes that pose no immediate fiscal impact to the existing programs or mandates.

IN THE MATTER OF:

JOINT APPLICATION OF GUAM TELECOM, LLC AND DOCOMO GUAM HOLDINGS, INC. FOR APPROVAL OF THE TRANSFER OF CONTROL OF GUAM TELECOM, LLC TO DOCOMO GUAM HOLDINGS, INC.

GT DOCKET 12-03

PUBLIC NOTICE OF JOINT APPLICATION OF GUAM TELECOM, LLC AND DOCOMO GUAM HOLDINGS, INC. FOR APPROVAL BY THE GUAM PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION (PUC) OF THE TRANSFER OF CONTROL OF GUAM TELECOM, LLC TO DOCOMO GUAM HOLDINGS, INC.

On September 21, 2012, Guam Telecom, LLC and Docomo Guam Holdings, Inc. filed a Joint Application for Approval by the PUC of transfer of ownership and control of Guam Telecom, LLC to Docomo Guam Holdings, Inc. If the transfer is approved, Docomo Guam Holdings, Inc. will purchase all of the ownership interest in Guam Telecom, LLC.

Guam Telecom LLC is the holder of Certificates of Authority authorizing it to provide resold and facilities based local exchange services and to provide facilities-based and resold special access service in the form of private line service on Guam.

When there is a substantial change of ownership, or a change in control, of a company holding a Certificate of Authority to provide telecommunications services in Guam, such change of ownership or transfer of control must be approved by the PUC. 12 GCA §§12103(c) and (g).

Notice of this Joint Application is hereby given to the members of the public and all interested persons and parties.

Any member of the public or interested person may file written comments for the record regarding the Joint Application. Comments must be received by the PUC on or before October 26, 2012. Such comments should be mailed, delivered, or e-mailed to:

Guam Public Utilities Commission
Suite 207, GCIC Building
414 W. Soledad Avenue
Hagatna, Guam 96910
ipalomo@guampuc.com

The Joint Application and other relevant materials in this Docket may be reviewed at the PUC Office or on the PUC Website at www.guampuc.com.

The PUC must decide whether the proposed sale or transfer satisfies the requirements for granting a certificate of authority: (1) whether the applicant possesses sufficient technical, financial, and managerial resources and abilities to provide telecommunications services in Guam; and (2) whether approval of the transfer of control of Guam Telecom, LLC to Docomo Guam Holdings, Inc. is contrary to the public interest.
