Nation

American-Indian (387) and African-American (345) children under 18 at 39 million whites, 17.6 million the South and upper Midwest with Wisconsin at the bottom, followed closely by Mississippi and Michigan. The highest scores were in states with relatively small black populations—Hawaii, New Hampshire, Utah and Alaska.

Outcomes varied for different subgroups of Asian and Latino children. For example, in terms of family income levels, children of Southeast Asian descent — Burmese, Hmong, Laotian, Cambodian and Vietnamese — faced greater hurdles than chilenough data to compare scores for American Indian children. Their scores were highest in Texas (631), Alabama (568), Florida (554) and Kansas (553), and lowest in the upper Midwest, the Southwest and the Mountain States. The score for Indian children in South Dakota — 185 — was the lowest of any group in any state on the index.

Some of South Dakota's Indian reservations are among the poorest nationwide, which contributes to high levels of domestic violence, alcoholism well-being that could be used to develop programs capable of bridging the racial gap. It said special emphasis should be placed on expanding job opportunities as children in the disadvantaged groups enter adulthood.

“Regardless of our own racial background or socio-economic position, we are inextricably interconnected as a society,” the report concluded. “We must view all children in America as our own — and as key contributors to our nation’s future.”

DC police say body may be girl's abductor

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Police may have found the body of a janitor suspected of murdering his wife and abducting an 8-year-old girl whose disappearance had made national headlines, District of Columbia Police Chief Cathy Lanier said on Monday.

Authorities have been searching for the girl, Relisha Rudd, and her suspected abductor, 51-year-old Kahlil Tatum, since discovering the body of Tatum's wife, Andrea Denise Tatum, in a suburban Maryland motel room on March 20.

“We have tentatively identified the person we found today as that of Mr. Tatum,” Lanier said, adding that the man appeared to have committed suicide. His body was discovered in Kenilworth Park and Aquatic Gardens in Washington.

Relisha Rudd was last seen with Tatum in Washington on March 1. The following day Tatum purchased a carton of 42-gallon trash bags and police said he was seen not long after in the area of the Aquatic Gardens.

Last week the FBI released surveillance footage of Rudd walking with Tatum down the hallway of a Washington hotel on Feb. 26.

Officials said the girl had been living with her family at the same homeless shelter where Tatum worked as a janitor. Tatum continued to go to work and was sighted in the city without the girl throughout the month, until he disappeared after his wife's murder on March 20.

“Our primary focus here was to find Relisha ... and we're not finished,” the chief said, adding that the search for the missing 8-year-old will resume in the park on Tuesday morning.

Lanier described the search of the 700-acre park, underway for almost a week on Monday, as a “recovery operation.”

The FBI is offering up to 25,000 for information leading to the location and return of Rudd.
